Test Taking Advice

The questions are relatively simple,
 So you shouldn't have too much trouble deciphering them.

Just remember that A is E, and B is A,
 And C is A if it's Tuesday, but W with a hangover if it's not.
 And D is the combination between A and C, minus the Square root of E if C is in a relationship with A.
 If C is not in a relationship with A,
 Then C is a sad bloke, and that's too bad,
 You'll just have to give your best estimate until C finally commits.

And before you examine the short answer section of the test,
 Just recall that you'll need to know the appropriate definitions,
 For the more complex words and phrases, such as
 'The' and 'It,' because we all know that the slightest
 Misunderstanding can lead to you writing a response
 About Europe's stance during the Korean War,
 Instead of a basic comparison between avocados
 And flamingos as the question originally meant to assert,
 Without intending to cause any confusion on the test-taker's part.

When you turn your attention over to the True-False component,
 It'll be of utmost importance for you to jot down the other answers,
 Such as 'Maybe,' 'Kind of,' 'Could be,' and 'Wahhhh!'
 Because it can be rest assured none of the displayed statements,
 Are exactly true or false, but rather this is an opinionated section,
 And you should be prepared to provide paragraph explanations,
 For your choice of font and writing utensil with regards to the weather.

When you've allotted yourself about an hour or so of dawdling,
 Simply crumple your paper up, flatten it out once more,
 Erase your name from the top line on the first page,
 As the term 'Name:' was meant to make your life easier,
 And group your quizzes along with everyone else's.
 Once you've done all of this, submit your papers forward,
 Making sure to check your answers with every paper
 That passes by you on its way to the front of the room.
 As you know, a few of the papers will be graded each day,
 Solely based on the teacher's mood and the amount of Space left on the paper for incorrect red markings or smiley faces.
